This mini bar runner is small in size and big on impression. It has a nitrile rubber base with a super absorbent polyester surface.
Disclaimer: Due to the way the bar runners are manufactured, there may be some difference in the placement of the artwork on the final product. As a result, borders may not be 100% centred, and artwork placed near the edge may vary in appearance between items. Variable-data printing (VDP) (Also known as variable-information printing (VIP) or VI) is a form of digital printing, including on-demand printing, in which elements such as text, graphics and images may be changed from one printed piece to the next, without stopping or slowing down the printing process and using information from a database or external file. For example, a set of labels, each with the same basic layout, can be printed with a different name on each label. Variable data printing is mainly used for direct marketing, customer relationship management, advertising, invoicing and applying addressing on selfmailers, brochures or postcard campaigns.
